Superior Court.—MONDAY, June 23.—Before Judge Mason.

David Gilkeson, Administrator, against Boston River Railroad.—Argued.—By the heirs of late David Gilkeson who was run over by one of the large cars in Gilkeson, and failed to recover damages already referred to. This case has been settled by the parties, the company giving to plaintiff, the sum of $300, and $150 to costs.

Tobias Scheide, agt. Alexander Maetzen.

—Suit for slander. In saying would not believe plaintiff under oath, &c. The complaint was dismissed.

Geo. W. Pawley, and Leming, his wife, agt. David Bobell, John Butler and Franklin Stodman.

—By tenants or residents of No. 1 Jones-st., re-building, agt. the owners of buildings re-built and set up and battery on st. Oct 1st last. The premises are used persons, and the testimony showed that Mr. Bobell, in particular, was severely beaten, and under the care for some days, of a physician.

Mrs. Yeomans, who resides in the lower part of the house, testified that Mr. Bobell came and she put him in rent. He then began talking about the old lad up stairs, and said he was going up stairs to give her a blow-up. He went up, knocked at the door, and accused her of having thrown him down the front steps, when he came in. He then got a pistol, and, under his name, was coming down stairs again, the witness being at the foot of the stairs, when Mr. Pawley, at the head of the stairs, reproached him for calling his wife names, and applied a term to him, when Mr. B. exclaim'd, "You—old rascal, I'll have your life," and sprung up stairs again, when witness heard Mr. P. making a noise as if some one had cut the throat. They backed into the room, when witness, in alarm, and fearing for his safety, ran off with the old man, and heard him shouting about, and heard Mrs. P. exclaim, "We shall be killed here alone." The other two defendants who lived on the premises, one in the front house, soon after went up stairs, and the noise continued. Finally, the three came down, Mr. Butler saying to Mr. Clark he had fixed the old rascal, and the other replying, "Yes, we have given him what he ought to have got long ago." Witness went up stairs after they were sent, saw Mrs. P. lying helpless and prostrate on the floor, and her hair bearing the marks of pain, and Mr. P. was in his lane, which was brought in, and Mr. Bobell's husband lay there, which was brought in, and went for a doctor. This is another pleasant illustration of the blessings of "our peculiar institution." (Merger (Pa) Free Presbyterian.)

They fired several shots at myself, and one nearly cut my hand. My wife can't get out of brother's house, nearly frantic, when they followed her and dragged her back to the house, and kicked and bruised her. They dragged my dead brother to the beach and threw him into his own boat and caused me to go into it.

They then put salt to it and conveyed us to the Harbor, before the Mormon Justice, who issued the warrants for us. My hand was bleeding during this time, and most of the following night, during which I was present. I waited several times, that night, for help, blood. That night I overheard Mr. McLeod say to McEloughlin, a Mormon, "you did one thing wrong that you'll not kill the other fellow—meaning myself"—and "you'll kill six others, and I will guarantee you against all law." McEloughlin cut out my brother's heart in my presence, and McLeod washed his hands in the blood!

They held an inquest on the body—the maid of the jurors had been engaged in murdering my brothers—men, who were not Mormons, would not sign the verdict. The Mormon, rough in a verdict to the last, said, "I hold the Mormon to be a liar, last, that they would kill me, my brother. They the Mormons are the instigators of this iniquity with huts built before their Mormon, last. Then us arrested twice last winter, and made us pay seventy dollars and some cents—they burned out our houses last winter, and a gang of them came afterwards, in broad daylight, armed to the teeth, and took our provision before our eyes, and we not daring to stop them.

Strong threatening us frequently. In consequence of being so injured, we sent to Strang, and told him if he would give us what we had to the Government for our farm, he could have it. "If you send, says he, "you're not needed, I would rather have it at 1000 than 1000." We sent to him, and he said, "I would kill you, if you did not give me 1000." He sent to the building which is owned by Samuel Sandford, and Sandford is $5,000. The losses to the building which is owned by Samuel Sandford is $5,000.
